Wonderful stories on Digital devices

Rikke Olafson

Danish Research Centre on Education and Advanced Media Materials

DREAM aims to facilitate creative media and information literacies by developing digital learning resources and practices across formal, semi-formal and informal learning sites. In partnership with public and private stakeholders, we:

- • produce robust scientific studies of creative forms of learning with digital resources to inform future-directed teaching and learning
- • shape new learning resources through user-led design and prototyping to support new forms of technology-assisted learning
- • share theory-driven evidence and best practices to advance the quality and usability of learning resources for 21st-century skills
- • sustain spaces of dialogue and debate between creative industries, developers of educational ict and media, and the learning sector to stimulate knowledge exchange and creative experimentation of wider societal impact.

Illerup Ådal
fjendens ansigt

- How can (cultural history) museums create engaging exhibitions, which appeals to many different target audiences?

- my target group – 13-23 year olds

Illerup Ådal exhibition - “Traditional” exhibition

Illerup Ådal exhibition - “Traditional” exhibition

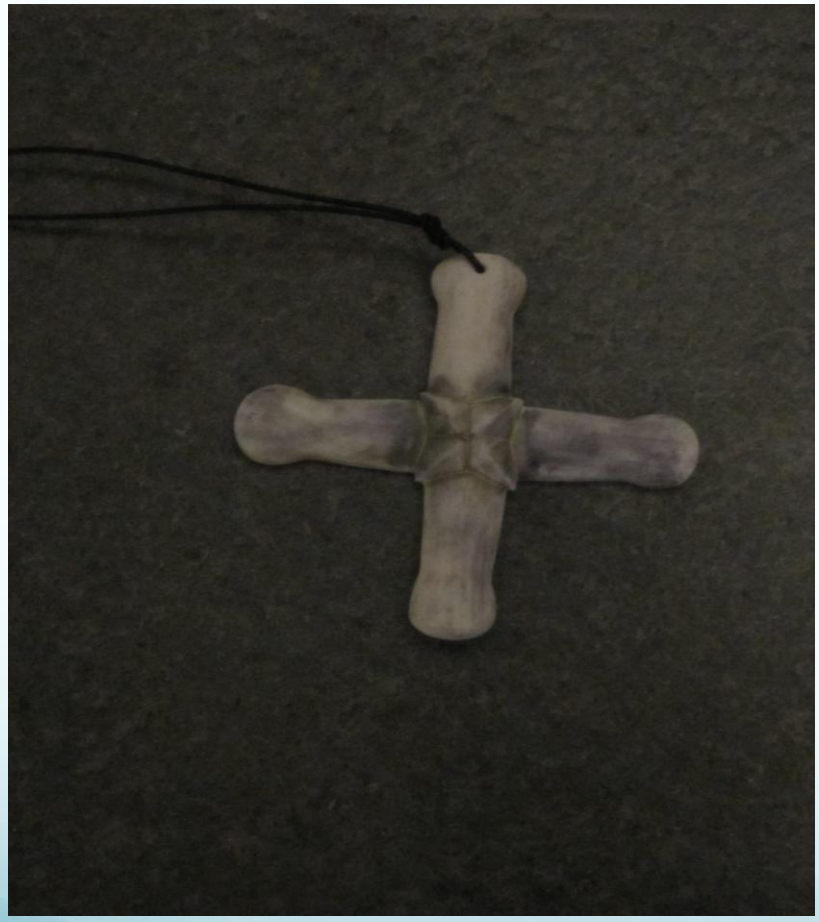

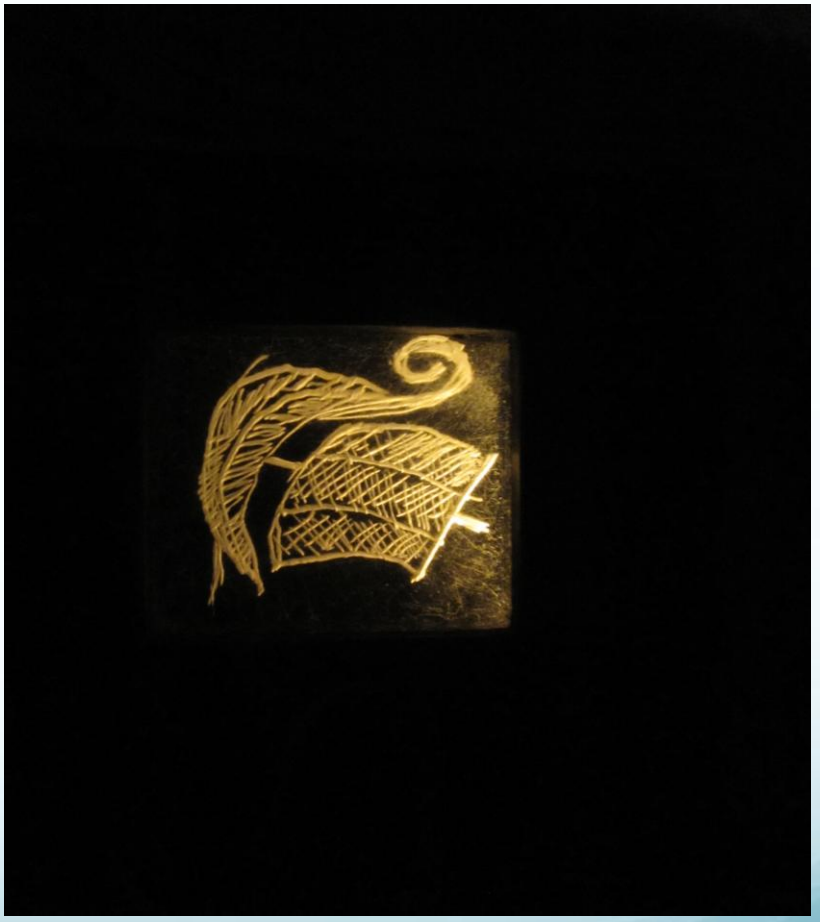

Seven Vikings exhibition

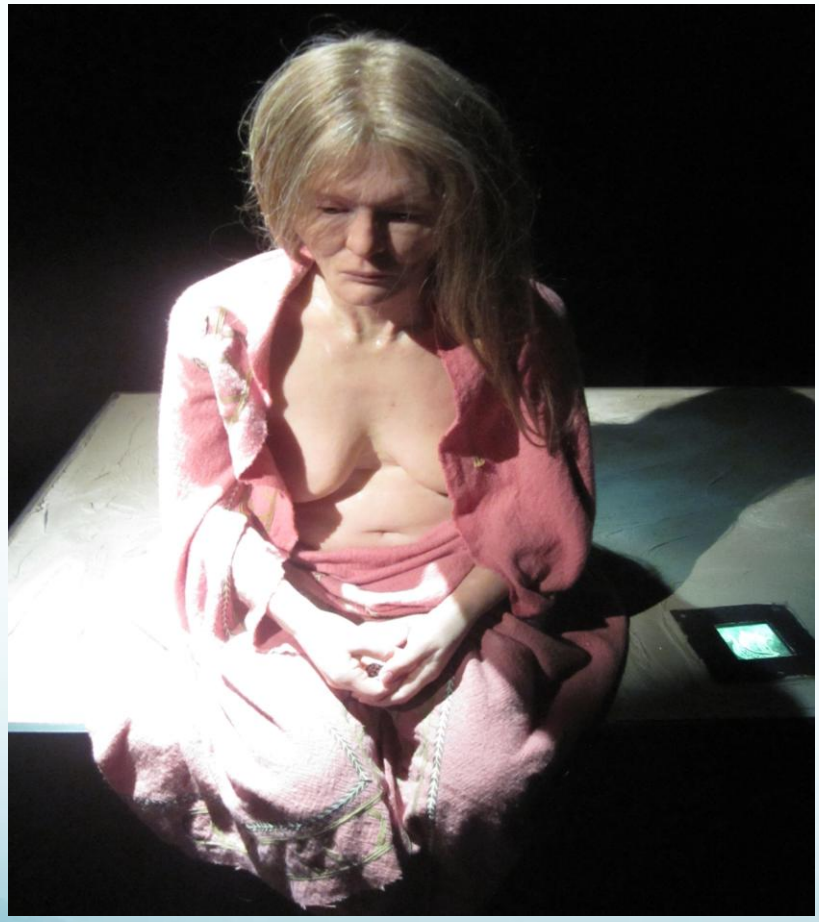

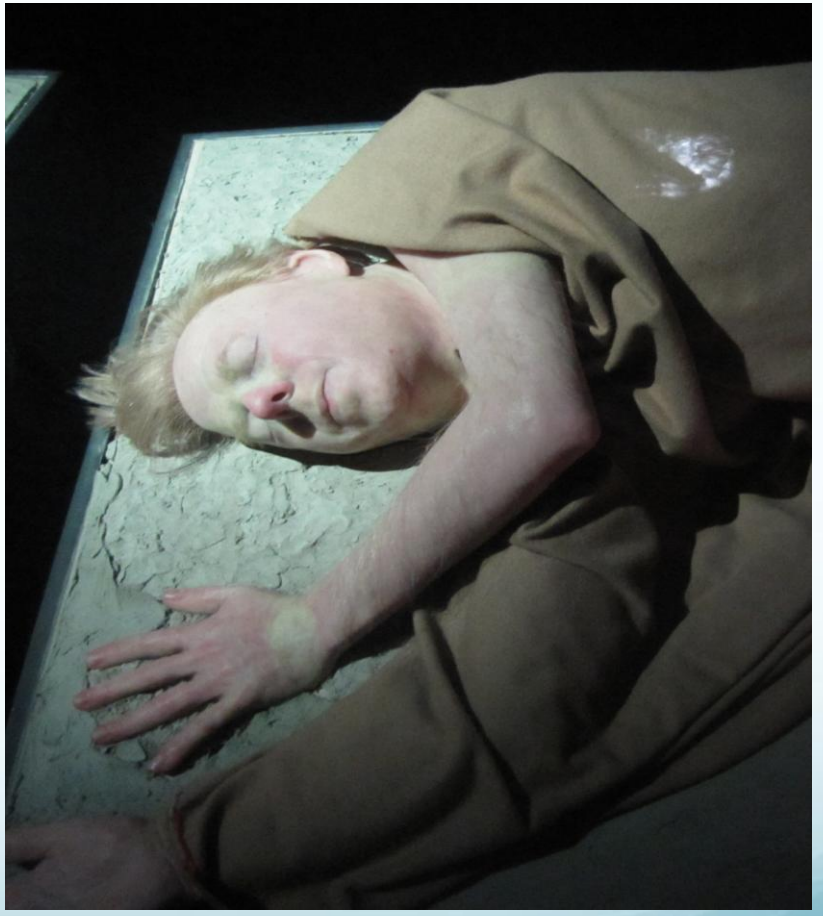

The tag

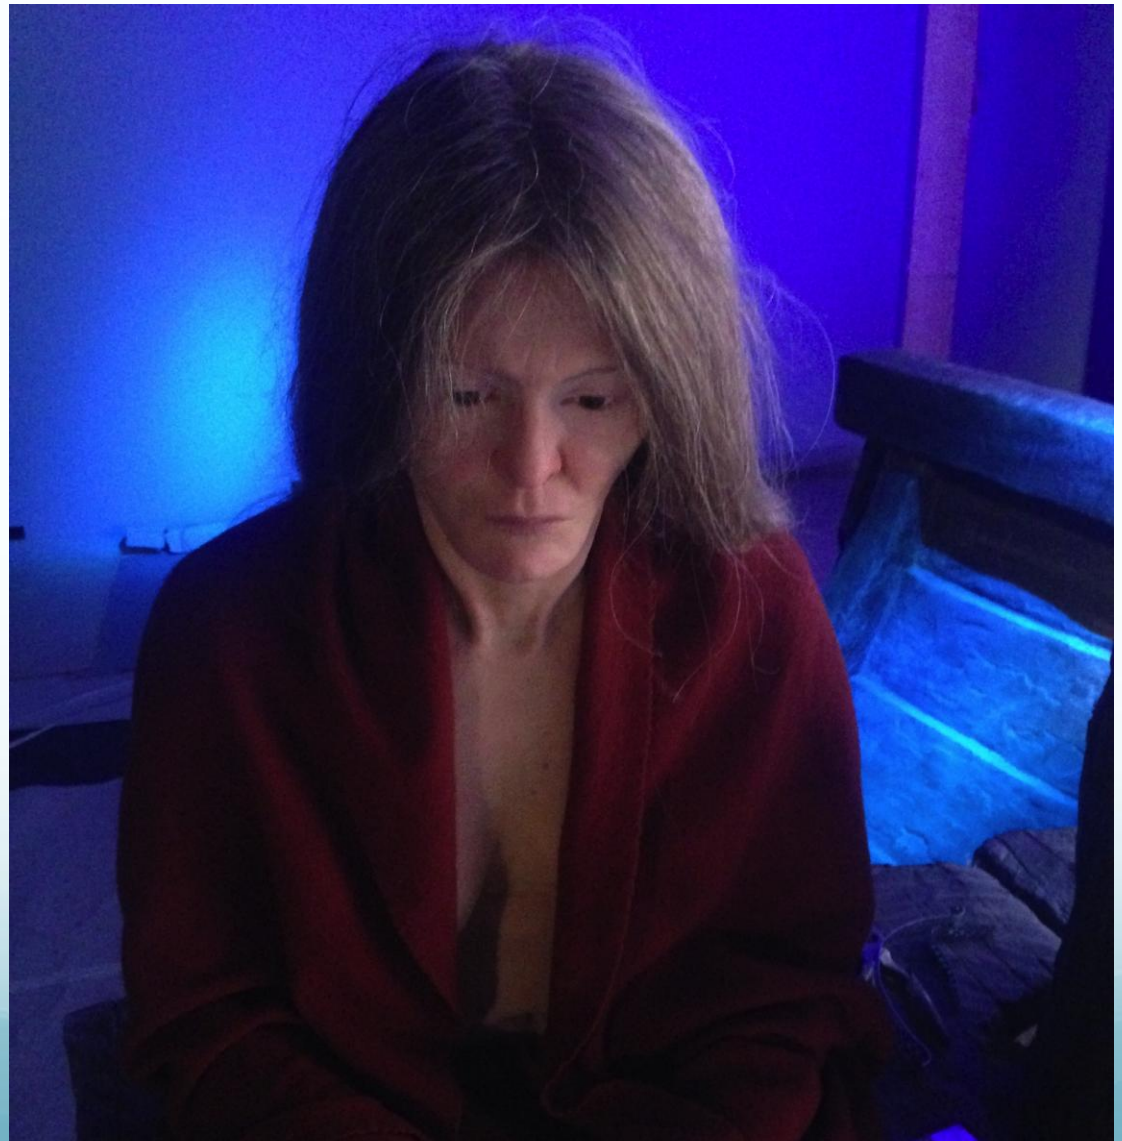

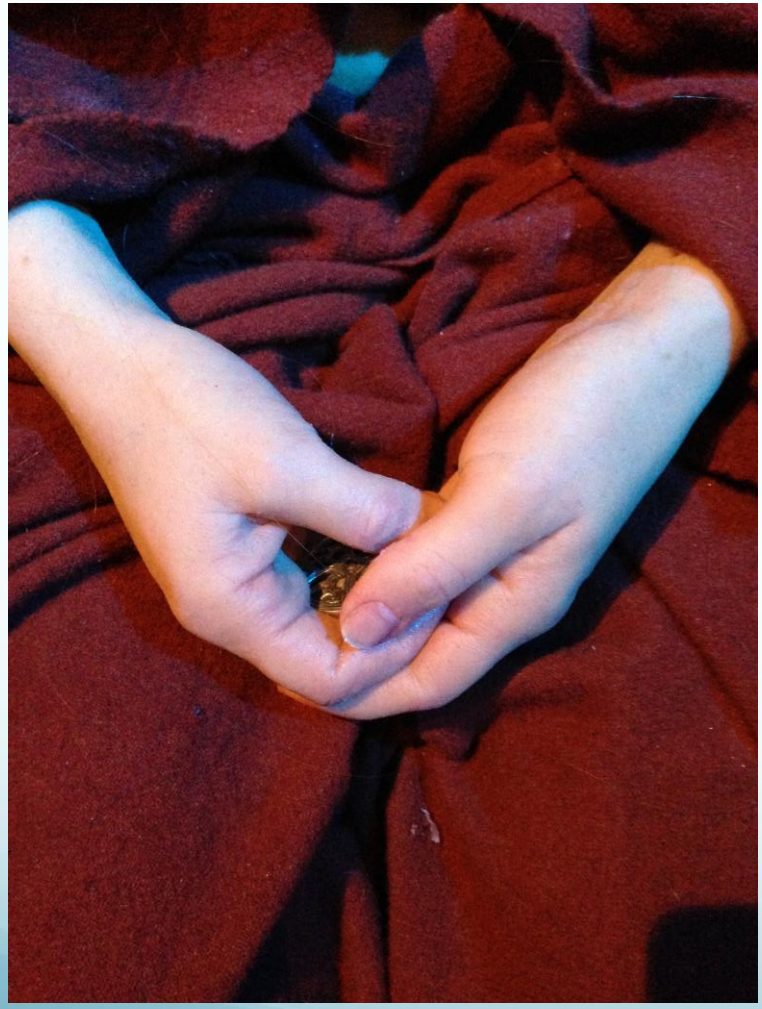

The Vikings

The Randelev Woman

- Girl A: “well first we talked about how real she looked, and then that I really wanted to give her a hug, as she looked so sad and alone haha”
- Girl B: (nodding) “yes yes I really wanted to take her hands and tell her that everything would be okay, that they [the men] would come back”

Ressonance and Wonder

- The power of the displayed object to reach out beyond its formal boundaries to a larger world, to evoke in the viewer the complex, dynamic cultural force from which it has emerged and for which it may be taken by a viewer to stand (Greenblatt 1991).
- The power of the displayed object to stop the viewer in his or her tracks, to convey an arresting sense of uniqueness, to evoke an exalted attention" (Greenblatt 1991 p. 42).